ANZ INVESTMENT FUNDS

CONSERVATIVE BALANCED FUND

ABOUT THIS FUND

The Conservative Balanced Fund invests mainly in income assets (cash and cash equivalents and fixed interest), with some exposure to growth assets (equities, listed property and listed infrastructure). The fund may also invest in alternative assets.

YOUR INVESTMENT TEAM

Your money is looked after by a highly experienced investment management team with a focus on long-term performance.

RESPONSIBLE INVESTING

We're strong advocates of responsible investing (also known as sustainable investing). Responsible investing means when we're considering whether to invest in a company, we don't just look at their financial performance. We also look at their environmental, social and governance (ESG) performance, because we believe these factors have a big impact on long-term returns

MARKET AND FUND REVIEW

The fund has a significant weighting to bonds, which make up about half of its holdings. International bond markets were unchanged, as expectations for early interest rate cuts were pushed back to later in the year given resilient economic data and signs of sticky inflation in some countries.

New Zealand bonds also experienced volatility and ended the guarter lower. Initial weakness was driven by domestic employment data, which showed the labour market remained tight, therefore underpinning wage (and inflationary) pressures. However, bond prices rose in the latter stages of the quarter, after the Reserve Bank of New Zealand (RBNZ) left interest rates unchanged and signalled a weakening outlook for the economy – and as economic growth data revealed that the country fell into recession in the second half of last year.

In contrast, international equities had a stellar first quarter of the year, with several share markets in the US, Europe and Asia reaching record highs. The market continued to react enthusiastically to the positive quarterly financial reports from many information technology and consumer services heavyweights, with the evolution of artificial intelligence (AI) being a core theme for investors.

In the US, the S&P 500 Index rose 10.6%, but the European and Japanese markets were standout performers. The Euro Stoxx 50 Index rose 12.8%, while Japan's Nikkei 225 Index rose 21.5%, helped by a revitalisation of its economy which has been stuck in a deflationary spiral for the last decade.

Although the fund delivered a positive return over the quarter, its performance was behind that of its benchmark. The fund's tactical positioning held back performance, as it was overweight to weaker-performing bonds, and underweight to stronger-performing international equities.

It was also a challenging period for our underlying international equity managers, with three out of four of them underperforming the market. An underweight to the information technology and communications services sectors was particularly detrimental, given strong performances from some of the companies within these sectors. Some positives however were strong company selection within both our New Zealand equity and international listed property holdings.

We maintain our underweight to international equities, and overweight to domestic and international fixed interest. This reflects our belief that the global economy will continue to slow in the coming months, dragged down by the flow-on effect of high interest rates. While the resilience of the US economic may mean it's able to push out a recession, or avoid one altogether, we're of the view that other regions will continue to slow – and so we remain defensively positioned.
