MARKET AND FUND REVIEW

The fund has a significant weighting to bonds, which make up over half of its holdings. Global government bonds had a mixed start to the year, with bonds in the US delivering strong returns, while those in several other markets faced headwinds.

Despite a positive quarter, US bonds faced increased volatility, primarily due to trade policy news from President Donald Trump. His inconsistent tariff announcements led investors to consider the potential for reaccelerated inflation, which could negatively impact bonds, against likelihood of a slower growth outlook, which would typically benefit bonds. Ultimately however, US bonds were higher due to a flight to safe-haven assets triggered by declines in equity markets

In Europe, bond markets were weaker. German government bonds fell, reflecting concerns about increased defence spending within the region being funded through an increase in bond issuance, while UK bonds faced similar concerns. Japanese government bonds were also lower, given growing expectations the Bank of Japan would increase interest rates due to a pick-up in local inflationary pressures.

New Zealand bonds finished the quarter slightly higher. The 50 basis point cut to the Official Cash Rate (OCR) was fully priced into the market, and other economic data – namely inflation and unemployment – also came in largely as expected.

The fund has a modest exposure to equity markets. US equity markets came under pressure with technology shares particularly weak amid ongoing concerns about new AI developments and their impact on the sector, while other US markets fell on the back of tariff-related concerns. European equity markets showed resilience, however, with the Euro Stoxx 50 Index up a solid 7.5% and the UK's FTSE 100 Index gaining 6.1%.

Contributing to performance was the funds allocation to global bonds – particularly those in the US, which delivered good returns over the quarter, while in equity markets, exposure to US equities were a small drag on performance as they finished the quarter lower.

We are neutral across global equities, global bonds and New Zealand bonds. Competing narratives continue to hinder high-conviction views. On the one hand, US equities appear to be supported by the pro-business and deregulatory policies from the White House. On the other hand, economic data appears to be weakening, albeit off strong levels, while ongoing concerns around the impact of tariffs appear to be posing downside risks.
