Conservative Fund

Fund description

The Conservative Fund invests mainly in income assets (cash and cash equivalents and fixed interest), with a smaller exposure to growth assets (equities and listed property). The fund may also invest in alternative assets.

Market Review

The fund registered a small negative return of 0.5% for the quarter, as global financial markets came under pressure. Growth assets, such as shares and listed property, fell on the back of concerns around inflationary pressures and rising interest rates. However defensive assets, such as fixed interest (bonds) and cash, delivered small gains.

The fund has a significant weighting to bonds, which make up around 60% of its holdings. We have been underweight to global bonds as we believe that rising interest rates will hold back this asset class. This detracted from returns, as bonds delivered positive gains, as did our investment approach to this asset class which meant we held a slightly higher allocation to the weak performing US bond market.

This was partially offset by our overweight to cash – which delivered good returns during a time when share markets were falling. Some strong stock selection within our international share holdings also helped limit the losses for investors, with three out of our four underlying investment managers outperforming the market.

Our outlook is unchanged. International shares should be supported by strong global growth. That said, we hold a neutral allocation to the asset class, as we recognise that markets are slightly overvalued. Elsewhere we remain underweight in international bonds, as we expect them to struggle as global interest rates move higher this year.
